Death benefit claim from employee's group life insurance

Employee's group life insurance is a policy taken out by their employer in case of their death. The insured person is the employee and coverage is based on employment relationship. This is why the details of an employee's last employment relationship are requested from the employer. The claimant should be in contact with the deceased person's last employer. The employer will fill in the form concerning its employee. Send the claim to the Employees' Group Life Assurance Pool, which processes all claims and handles the death benefit payments.

Details of the insured person

Fill in the details of the insured person (deceased) as accurately as possible. The insurer obtains population register information on the insured person and beneficiaries by means of a technical connection. An official death certificate is required for accidental deaths when an increase for accidental death is applied for.

Employment relationship details

Details on the insured person's employment speed up the processing, but an application can also be sent without such details.

Beneficiaries

The beneficiaries of employees' group life insurance are defined in the insurance terms and conditions. The beneficiaries are the insured person's widow(er), partner of a registered partnership and common-law spouse under certain conditions and the insured person's children under 22 years of age.

Information needed for processing

Compensation is claim by means of a claims form. Please attach the following documents (whichever are applicable):

- 1) A common-law spouse claiming compensation must submit an officially certified contract on mutual support and any other details that may be required to prove that the claimant lived in the same household.
- 2) Death certificate if the insured person died accidentally, and an increase for accidental death is claimed. A death certificate must always be signed by a doctor and it must include the details and cause of death. If necessary, a police investigation report may also be requested for the claims processing.

Other documents may be asked, if needed, for solving the claims handling process.

Signing the claim

All legally competent persons sign the claim personally. Children aged more than 18 sign their claims personally. Claims submitted by underage children and any legally incompetent person is signed by their trustee.

Death benefit

Death benefit is only paid on the basis of one employment relationship. The death benefit is always paid when the insured person has beneficiaries specified in the insurance terms and conditions. If there are no beneficiaries, the death benefit will not be paid. The death benefit consists of a basic benefit and any child increases and increases for accidental death. The amount of the benefit is determined on the year of death and the insured person's age.

Payment of death benefit

The death benefit will be paid to the beneficiary. Any benefit to children under 18 or legally incompetent person is paid to an account specified by their trustee. Guardianship authorities will be informed of any benefit paid to an underage child or legally incompetent person.
